Politics & Legislation

by John Faro, Political Junkie & Concerned Citizen

While you are enjoying family and friends this holiday season, the political process is ongoing.

The future is a little brighter with the results of the last election. Most of these United States sent a powerful message to Washington DC. Whether the politicians heed that message remains to be seen. We know the "gentleman" in the White House is not bothered by the Constitution, the rule of law, or the will of the American people. We have won a battle but the war rages on unabated.

At the last GONH (Gun Owners of New Hampshire) meeting, Representative J. R. Hoel addressed the meeting to explain what our friends in Concord hope to achieve with the NH House and Senate in control of the Republicans.

Bill O'Brien has been elected as speaker of the House and Rep. Hoel believes the pro-gun establishment can work with Speaker O'Brien to accomplish passing legislation that is beneficial to law-abiding gun owners and users.

Some of the legislation being considered by the Republican caucus is as follows: Constitutional carry, legislate the definition of "suitable person" in regards to concealed carry, and try to legislate a process to expunge names from the state NICS list of ineligible firearms owners. This is considered a civil rights issue. Obviously this is on the state level not the federal portion of NICS.

Hopefully, you are all aware of the President's unilateral move to grant amnesty to five million illegal aliens. Most of us have ancestors who legally immigrated to the United States for a better life for their families and themselves. They were eager to assimilate to the American way of life and honor their traditions. This is not the situation we have today. A lot of these folks coming to our country illegally don't want to be Americans they just want what America offers without earning it. Our country and our economy cannot survive under this onslaught.

Keep a vigilant eye on your Washington representatives and senators to hold them accountable to the will of the people.

I hope everyone has a Merry Christmas and a Happy, prosperous New Year. With a little help from above things will be brighter for all in the year 2015.

Ruger 10/22® Magazine Maintenance

Reprinted from Gunsmoke Engineering

At Gunsmoke Engineering, we get a lot of email from folks that are having problems with reliable cartridge feeding, usually from aftermarket magazines. Ruger factory magazines are very good in this regard, but hard use or manufacturing defects can cause problems for these magazines as well. In the following paragraphs I'll describe some of the more common magazine related problems and show some tips for dealing with them. I'll also show how to disassemble and clean the Ruger magazine to restore it to as-new condition.

The most trouble I've had with feeding came from faulty, poorly designed, aftermarket mags. In my experience, RamLine mags are among the worst in this regard: I once had six mags of this type that wouldn't reliably feed. I went to the RamLine factory in Golden, Colorado and exchanged them for six new mags, and none of those would feed either. All six ended up in the trash. I've had good luck with Eaton Supply Inc. 25 round magazines, and also with Butler Creek "Hot Lips" magazines. If you must use an aftermarket magazine, the best you can do is the Butler Creek "Steel Lips" mag. All of the mags mentioned so far, except the Ruger and "Steel Lips", use plastic for their construction, and the feed lips that guide the cartridge into the chamber are prone to wear and will eventually start to give feed problems. This doesn't happen with the Ruger and "Steel Lips" mags, since the feed lips are made from steel which is much harder than the brass cartridges which pass through them.

Feed problems can also be caused by dirty magazines. Unfortunately, all of the aftermarket magazines I'm familiar with are permanently assembled and can not be taken apart for cleaning. About the best you can do for these is to brush off the feed lips and follower with a toothbrush and some evaporating solvent, like Birchwood Casey "Crud Cutter" or electrical contact cleaner. Best do this outside where the vapors won't give you breathing problems. Leave the magazines upside down to drain and dry after doing this, and don't put any oil into them because the oil will trap dirt in the mags.

The Ruger mags are the best, and if that's what you're using and you still have feed problems, it could be that it wasn't assembled at the factory properly. It could also be that the mag interior is dirty.

The Ruger 10/22 magazine is easily serviced. Here's how:

1- Remove the magazine from the rifle and remove any cartridges that it may contain.

2- Begin disassembly by backing out the socket head cap screw at the front, using a 9/64" Allen wrench. When it's almost out, push it back in to push out the spring retaining cap on the other end of the magazine. Keep your finger on this piece to prevent loss. Set the screw aside.

3- Remove the spring retaining cap from the spring, noting how the end of the spring engages the small hole in the cap. Set the cap aside.

4- Remove the end of the magazine and set it aside.

5- Pull out the magazine rotor. Keep track of how it's positioned so you can replace it correctly.

6- Slide the cartridge feed lips out of the magazine shell and set aside.

7- Clean everything up in dish soap, Simple Green, or Hoppe's, dry it off, and coat the spring with a very light coat of oil. Oil in the mag itself just gathers dust.

8- Put the cartridge feed lips back into the top of the mag shell. The feed lips fit into the magazine shell tilted to the right, with the large boss fitting the hole in the back of the mag shell and the rounded end of the feed lip opening toward the back of the mag shell.

9- Make sure that the end of the spring with the right angle bend engages the hole in the rotor.

10- Put the spring and rotor into the mag shell. Notice how one of the vanes on the rotor is longer than the others? Make sure that this vane fits up into the cartridge feed lips, and that the end of the rotor engages the shoulder at the back end of the magazine shell.

11- Put the front end shell cap in place, verifying that the rotor spring sticks out through the hole in the center and that the small boss on the cartridge feed lips engages the hole in the shell cap.

12- Engage the protruding end of the rotor spring in the small hole in the shoulder of the spring retaining cap. Verify that the full length of the spring beyond the bend enters the hole. You may want to support the end of the spring with a small screwdriver when engaging the end in the cap hole.

13- Thread the screw through the front of the mag shell and rotor and start the screw into the spring retaining cap.

14- You need to tension the spring by winding the spring retaining cap in a clockwise direction. Start by taking up all the slack in the spring, verifying that the long rotor vane is visible between the cartridge feed lips. Note that the spring retaining cap has six flats on it. With all slack removed, turn the cap six flats more to tension the spring. Push the cap into the mag shell, then tighten the screw.

15- Check the follower tension: it should be sufficient to snap smartly back when you depress the follower with a drift or screwdriver. If it's not, loosen the screw and re-check the

NRA Basic Pistol Instructor Course

10 January 2015

During the course, candidates will learn NRA policies and procedures, basic public speaking skills, training methodology, use of a training team and training aids, organizing a course, building a budget, and finally preparing to teach. In addition, candidates will be provided the appropriate lesson plans and basic course student packets. Role-playing is a major part of an instructor course. Candidates take turns working in teams, actually conducting portions of the course to other candidates who portray basic students.

Candidates must possess and demonstrate a solid background in firearm safety and shooting skills acquired through previous firearm training and/or previous shooting experience. Instructor candidates must be intimately familiar with each action type in the discipline they wish to be certified.

Candidates will be required to demonstrate solid and safe firearms handling skills required to be successful during an instructor training course by completing pre-course questionnaires and qualification exercises administered by the NRA Appointed Training Counselor.

Cost of the course is $200.

THIS COURSE IS LIMITED TO 20 STUDENTS

NRA Range Safety Officer

Training Course

24 January 2015

The NRA Range Safety Officer program was developed in response to the demand for a nationally-recognized range safety officer certification. NRA Range Safety Officers are people who possess the knowledge, skills, and attitude essential to organizing, conducting, and supervising safe shooting activities and range operations. This is a nine-hour course that consists of classroom time and practical exercises conducted on a range. Cost of the course is $35.
